

Strong* and MBTI® Career Report

Judith Grutter and Allen L. Hammer

prepared for
JOHN SAMPLE
June 18, 2005

As part of your career exploration, you have taken two of the most widely used instruments in use today—the Strong Interest Inventory® (Strong) and the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator® (MBTI®) assessments.

The purpose of this Strong and MBTI® Career Report is to help you use your results from these two instruments to better understand yourself and to expand your career options.

Your results from the Strong and the MBTI tools can help you find a job or career, change jobs, or improve your job satisfaction. Both instruments provide you with information that you can use to better understand the connection between your interests, your preferences, and your work environment. Sometimes improving the connection means finding an environment that is a good fit; sometimes it means changing or altering the environment so it better meets your needs; or sometimes it means developing other interests, preferences, or ways of working.

This report is designed to add to what you already have learned from prior interpretations of the Strong and the MBTI tools. Before reading this report, you should discuss your Strong and MBTI results with a career professional. The material in this report is based on research on the relationship between the Strong and the MBTI assessments, and more than ten years of experience using both instruments in career counseling.

You can use this Strong and MBTI® Career Report to identify:

- Work environments and tasks that you may find satisfying
- Specific occupations that offer good possibilities for exploration
- Strategies for career development
- Tactics for using your personality preferences to stay motivated during the career exploration process

A REVIEW OF YOUR RESULTS

Your combined results on the Strong and the MBTI assessments are based on the same assumption—that you are more likely to be satisfied, and therefore more productive, if you are working at something that you find interesting and in an environment that is compatible with your personal characteristics. The Strong is based on the idea that there are six types of people and work environments; the MBTI tool identifies sixteen personality types.

Your Strong Results

As you will recall, your Strong Profile showed your level of interest in six General Occupational Themes. The General Occupational Themes and a brief description of them are arranged around the hexagon below. The two Themes in which you showed the highest level of interest are indicated by boldface type.

Your Strong results indicate that your interests are primarily in the Enterprising and Realistic Themes. People with interests in the Enterprising and Realistic Themes usually enjoy directing the production of goods in efficient and action-oriented work environments. Persuading or supervising others within a clear chain of command is important to them.

Your MBTI® Results

Your MBTI results showed your preferences on each of the four scales, as determined by your answers to the MBTI items. However, when verifying your type, you indicated that another set of preferences might be a better fit for you. Therefore, your “best-fit” type is the one used throughout this report. You indicated that your best-fit type was as follows:

E	S	T	J
Extraversion	Sensing	Thinking	Judging
Attuned to the external environment	Focused on relevant facts	Logical and analytical	Decisive and structured

People with ESTJ preferences like to take charge and administer programs and procedures smoothly and efficiently. They like to solve problems in a systematic way and to make decisions using logical, objective analysis of data.

YOUR COMBINED RESULTS

Now that you have reviewed your Strong and MBTI results separately, you can consider your combined results.

Your combined results on these two instruments suggest:

- What you might like to do.
- How you might like to do it.
- What kind of work environment you might find most satisfying.

Your combined type is Enterprising and ESTJ. This report focuses on characteristics of the Enterprising Theme, because that is the Theme in which you showed the most interest. This Theme probably represents your strongest career motivator and those activities that provide you with the most energy. Work environments that represent these interests will most likely attract you first.

However, remember that your results on the Strong show that you also have some interest in the Realistic Theme. You may find it helpful to discuss with your career counselor how this Theme may affect your career exploration.

THE ESTJ AND ENTERPRISING AT WORK

People with ESTJ preferences usually enjoy evaluating information and organizing tasks. They focus on learning the facts necessary for accomplishing a goal, and like to use these facts to make logical, objective decisions. Their work responsibilities often include making decisions, managing, supervising, and seeing that organizations are run smoothly and effectively.

Those with Enterprising interests on the Strong are most often attracted to competitive, fast-paced work environments where they can use their status and power to influence others. They usually enjoy working in business or politics and like to sell products, manage others, and persuade people.

You can probably tell from these descriptions that ESTJs are often attracted to Enterprising work environments. Your particular contributions to an Enterprising work environment might include:

- Your ability to follow through on projects
- Your ability to apply what you have learned from past experience
- Your attention to facts and concern with accuracy

In general, management and administrative positions in competitive business environments will probably appeal most to you. Retailing, small business management, corporate management, and insurance sales are among the many career fields you might want to consider.

YOUR PERSONAL STYLE AND PREFERENCES

Work Style

Your score on the Strong Work Style scale suggests that you may enjoy both working with others as well as some time to be alone. On the MBTI, you indicated a preference for Extraversion (E). This combination of results suggests that although you like a mixture of working with others and working alone, you tend to get energized by your contacts with the external world. You may find opportunities for some of this “people” contact outside of your work environment.

Learning Environment

Finding a job or developing skills that can lead you to a new career may require you to obtain additional education or training. Your score on the Learning Environment scale of the Strong suggests that you prefer a learning environment that will allow you to pursue and achieve specific, short-term educational goals. Your preference for Sensing (S) on the MBTI suggests that you like to see practical applications for your learning. You probably see education or training as a means to acquiring a specific skill or receiving a certificate or degree that indicates your expertise in a particular area.

Leadership

Your score on the Strong Leadership Style scale suggests that you would probably prefer a job that provides you with the opportunity to take charge and to direct others. Your preference for Extraversion (E) on the MBTI suggests that you are probably an outgoing leader who clearly expresses goals and objectives and tries to motivate others to work toward those goals.

Risk Taking/Adventure

The remaining Strong Personal Style Scale, the Risk Taking/Adventure scale, is more relevant to how you might approach the career exploration process. Therefore, your results on this scale are discussed in the Career Exploration section of this report.

Now that you have seen how your Strong results on the Personal Style Scales relate to your MBTI type, you can identify specific occupations to explore. For each of the occupations that you consider, think about how it fits with what you know about your preferences and personal style.

OCCUPATIONS TO EXPLORE

Now that you have a general idea of how you like to work and the environments you might find most satisfying, you can focus on some specific occupations that are suggested by both your Strong and your MBTI results. The chances are good that one or more of these occupations would be an excellent career opportunity for you, and that you will find the work satisfying and enjoyable, because, for the occupations on this list:

- Your interests are similar or very similar to people working in that occupation who reported that they were satisfied with their job, and
- These occupations tend to attract people with ESTJ preferences.

Occupations Suggested by Your Combined Results

Occupation	Knowledge or Skills	Tasks
Purchasing Agent	Accounting & mathematics; using calculators & business machines; accurate record-keeping	Purchase equipment & supplies Interview & manage vendors Evaluate costs, product performance, inventories
Store Manager	Accounting, management; social skills; leadership; speaking & writing clearly; accurate record-keeping	Develop & implement policies & processes Manage financial operations Supervise & train workers
Police Officer	Criminology, law, & first aid; using firearms; agility; physical strength; speaking & writing clearly	Patrol assigned beat; write & file daily report Render first aid Investigate causes & results of accidents
Food Service Manager	Menu planning, food quality & costs; leadership; accurate record-keeping; verbal communication	Coordinate food service activities Estimate costs & requisition or purchase supplies Hire & assign personnel
Banker	Business & financial information systems; using computers & related equipment; making decisions from data	Direct bank monetary programs Review financial & operating statements Maintain business affiliations
Restaurant Manager	Management techniques, accounting; leadership; verbal communication; social skills	Hire & supervise food service employees Keep records of supplies & equipment May direct preparation of food & plan menus
School Administrator	Management techniques, mathematics; leadership; social skills; speaking & writing clearly & persuasively	Administer a school or school system Confer with teachers, students, & parents Interview, hire, & evaluate teachers
Realtor	Property analysis & evaluation; speaking & writing clearly & persuasively; social skills	Rent, buy, & sell properties for clients Draw up real estate contracts & negotiate loans Develop contacts & prospects for future sales

MORE OCCUPATIONS TO EXPLORE

The occupations on the previous page were recommended for exploration because they match both your Strong interests and your MBTI preferences. However, that list was just a starting point for your career exploration. The list below provides more occupations for you to investigate. Some occupations listed here may have been suggested by both instruments. Others listed here are suggested by one or the other of the instruments. (This may occur simply because the occupations on the Strong and the MBTI tools overlap to some extent but they do not match exactly.)

More Occupations Suggested by Your Results

Actuary	Agribusiness Manager
Audiologist	Buyer
Corporate Trainer	Credit Manager
Elected Public Official	Emergency Medical Technician
Farmer	Housekeeping & Maintenance Supr.
Life Insurance Agent	Military Enlisted Personnel
Military Officer	Optician
Paralegal	Parks & Recreation Coordinator
Plumber	Public Administrator
Research & Development Manager	Travel Agent

SUGGESTIONS FOR EXPLORING YOUR OCCUPATIONS LISTS

As you consider the occupations listed in this report that are suggested by your results, think about how each one of them fits with your personality. To do this, you might ask yourself:

- Will this career allow me to make decisions and to manage others?
- Will I be able to influence the way the organization is run?
- Will I be appreciated for my logical and systematic follow-through?

To help you further define what job satisfaction means to you, also think about what the suggested occupations have in common, or how they might be different. Are there any skills that seem to transfer across all of the occupations? Can you narrow down your choices to those that best fit your current interests?

STRATEGIES FOR CAREER DEVELOPMENT

You have indicated that you are satisfied with your current job. This probably means that it provides a good match for your personality preferences. Although you will probably always feel most comfortable in settings that provide such a match, it might be interesting for you to consider how your personality may develop and how your interests might change as you get older. Think about what you might do to expand your interests or enrich your life by developing other preferences.

Often, people find that as they mature, they want to explore the less-preferred dimensions of their personality. You might find that you may want to:

- Find ways to help others, perhaps through teaching or volunteer work.
- Pay more attention to the future and the “big picture.”
- Try new ways of doing things that may at first seem impractical and inefficient.

Focusing on facts and accuracy, and dealing directly with what is practical and useful will probably always be your primary work motivators. However, you may find increasing enjoyment in understanding and helping others, and in exploring theoretical concepts and ideas.

Although your primary interests are in the Enterprising Theme, you may also want to explore work environments suggested by your Realistic Theme, or even find a way to incorporate elements of all of your highest Themes into one work setting. Consider how you might:

- Be more physically active in your work,
- Spend more of your time outdoors,
- Find an opportunity to use tools or machinery,
- Spend time solving mechanical problems.

You may also have leisure interests and hobbies that could become work-related. Consider how you might already be doing some of the things listed above in other areas of your life, and how the interests and skills that you have developed might be incorporated into your career.

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUCCESSFUL CAREER EXPLORATION

You have reviewed your Strong and MBTI results, and you've identified work environments, tasks, and occupations that you might find satisfying. Here are some points to keep in mind as you continue your career exploration:

Your score on the Strong Risk Taking/Adventure scale suggests that although you may consider yourself somewhat of a risk taker, employer dependability and job security are probably important to you. Moving in a completely new career direction may not come easily for you.

You may find yourself pulled between wanting to try a different career path, and the reality of your need for security. Doing adequate preparation and homework and taking small steps will make any change that you make easier than trying to make blind, sweeping changes.

Staying Motivated

There may be times when the career exploration process seems too internal to you. It may require you to be more contemplative than you like to be. To keep yourself motivated,

- Try to find a networking group so you can expand your own contacts and connections.
- Talk to as many people as possible who work in occupations related to your interests, and discuss your questions with someone in those career fields.
- Ask a friend to provide objective feedback if you seem to be acting too quickly.

Be sure to capitalize on your ESTJ strengths to help you get over any roadblocks in the career exploration process:

Use your Extraversion to discuss each stage of the process with others, to move to action, to network, and to fine-tune your interviewing skills. But don't overlook the importance of reflecting on each step that you take.

Use your Sensing to collect all the necessary facts about your alternatives, and find out how others have managed their career search. But be sure to explore new opportunities that occur during your career exploration, too.

Use your Thinking to examine objectively the logical consequences of your alternatives. But don't forget to pay attention to how the job matches your personal values—how you feel about each alternative, or how others might be affected by your decision.

Use your Judging to structure your activities, set goals, and establish time lines. But try to take advantage of new opportunities that may develop along the way.

THE ONGOING CAREER EXPLORATION PROCESS

If you think that you would find additional self-assessment helpful, ask a career professional about taking some other assessment instruments. For example, the Values Scale can help you identify what values might be important to you; the Career Beliefs Inventory can help you identify issues that may block or hinder your career exploration. You may also find the booklet Where Do I Go Next? helpful; it explains Strong-related interests, values, skills, and motivators and the role they play in career decision-making. These resources are all available from CPP, Inc.

In addition, you can read detailed descriptions of the occupations that interest you in the Dictionary of Occupational Titles and the Occupational Outlook Handbook. Both of these publications are available in most public and school libraries. Your career professional may also have copies of these resources. To read interviews with people who work in a variety of careers, get the book Real People, Real Jobs. Forty people whose interests represent each of the six broad General Occupational Themes are interviewed. This book is available from Davies-Black Publishing.

You might also want to talk to people who are familiar with the occupations that interest you. Conduct informational interviews with them, keeping your preferences and your interests in mind as you focus on your options. The final step of your career exploration will be to look for job openings in the occupations that are on your list and to begin the application process. Check with your career professional frequently to make sure that you stay motivated and on target. Good luck as your career continues to unfold and develop!